NANKING WAR TALK TAKEN SERIOUSLY.

A happy informal group of three of Britain's National Government leaders. The Rt Hon. Mr. H. H. Thomas is seen, in a characteristic attitude, talking over the situation with Mr. Stanley Baldwin and Mr. Neville Chamberlain.

WARMING UP FOR ELECTION.

ANTI-LABOUR CO-OPERATION.

THE PREMIER'S BIRTHDAY.

London, Oct. 2.
Election activity is proceeding at high pressure throughout the country.

As Nomination Day approaches there are increasing indications of a determination to avoid three-cornered contests as far as possible. In a number of London constituencies for instance, arrangements have already been made whereby the Labour opposition will be met by only one candidate, pledged to support the National Government on the basis of the Prime Minister's manifesto.

Elsewhere efforts to effect similar arrangements between the Liberals and Conservatives are proceeding.

Lord Grey's Full Support.

The veteran Liberal statesman, Lord Grey, in a speech in London this afternoon, professed himself a warm supporter of the manifesto of the Prime Minister. He commended the honourable decisions of those Liberals who had stood aside in favour of National Labour and Conservative candidates.

Referring to the disorganised state of the world, he said that in view of the possibilities of complications arising, it would be unfair to expect pledges from the Government which would fetter their power to deal with emergencies.

Premier's Birthday.

The Prime Minister left London this morning for Seaham Harbour to conduct his personal election campaign. A large crowd assembled at the station to wish him success and to congratulate him on his 65th birthday which he celebrated to-day. A large number of messages of congratulation including a telegram from the King and Queen were received by Mr. MacDonald.

BRITISH TRADE RETURNS.

IMPORTS & EXPORTS BOTH UP.

London, Oct. 12.
The Board of Trade returns for September show imports totalling £68,917,920, being an increase of £3,066,840 on August and a decrease of £10,271,517 on the previous September.

Exports for last month aggregated £29,840,057, an increase of £709,142 on August, but a decrease of £12,594,580 on September of last year.—British Wireless.

Hongkong Passport Muddle.

QUESTIONS FOR GOVERNMENT.

Following the Telegraph's revelations of the Hongkong-China passport muddle, the Hon. Mr. W. E. L. Shenton has given notice that he will ask the following questions in Legislative Council on Thursday:

Is Government aware that British subjects proceeding from Hongkong to Shanghai are called upon to have their passports vised on entering Shanghai, and that considerable inconvenience is caused to them thereby?

In the event of this practice being insisted upon will Government provide facilities for British subjects obtaining a Chinese visa in Hongkong?

Is any distinction made between the Hongkong born British subjects and other British subjects?

BURMA PARLEY DELEGATES.

LORD PEEL TO BE CHAIRMAN.

London, Oct. 12.
The Chairman of the projected Burma Round Table Conference and the delegates from the British political parties who will attend are as follows:

Chairman, Lord Peel; Conservative party delegates, Earl Winter and Mr. J. S. Wardlaw Milne; Liberal Party delegates, Viscount Mersey and Mr. Isaac Foot; Labour Party delegates, Mr. G. H. Hall and Major Graham Pole.—British Wireless.

"WORLD TITLE" FIGHT.

CARNERA AND SHARKEY.

New York, Oct. 12.
After two postponements, a fifteen rounds contest between Primo Carnera, the Italian giant, and Jack Sharkey, the American champion, which the New York Boxing Commission (despite Schmeling's recent victory over Sharkey) is recognising as for the world's championship, takes place at Ebbets Field to-night, weather permitting.

Carnera will go into the ring at 18 st. 11 lbs. Sharkey will be conceding over four stone, having weighed in this morning at 14 st. 6 lbs.—Reuter's American Service.

Sharkey defeated Carnera on points.—Reuter.

THREE DAYS ADRIFT.

Terrible Plight of Junk Crew.

RESCUED BY H. K. STEAMER.

The dramatic rescue of seven fishermen, who had been drifting with the wreck of a waterlogged junk for three days and nights, was described this morning by an officer of the Butterfield and Swire s.s. Kueichow, on her return from a voyage to Tongku via Weihaiwei.

When still some distance out of Weihaiwei, signals of distress were noticed from a waterlogged fishing junk in lat. 36 deg. 16' N. long. 123 deg. 12' E.

The vessel hove-to and approached the wreck. Seven men were found clinging to the logs. Most of them were in the last stages of exhaustion, and no time was lost in effecting their rescue, which was successfully accomplished in spite of the heavy seas running. A strong northerly wind was blowing, and the sky was overcast.

Safely on board the vessel, the wrecked fishermen were fed and given medical treatment, after which they told their story.

They were all natives of Wei Hai Wei, and had set out in their junk for Antung and Sinitau with a cargo of logs, beams and bean-cakes. Soon after leaving port, they encountered bad weather.

Efforts were made to reach land, but the rough seas battered them about and the junk eventually took water and sank. It was only the cargo of logs which prevented it from going to the bottom altogether.

In a Sorry Plight.

They clung to the wreck for three days and nights, drifting wherever the winds carried them, until their rescue. They could not have lasted much longer and were all in a sorry plight when the Kueichow arrived fortuitously.

The master of the Kueichow landed his proteges at Weihaiwei, and wireless ships that the junk wreck constituted a danger to navigation.

EMERGENCY SQUAD IN MISHAP.

MOTOR-VAN HIT BY A TRAMCAR.

As the Police emergency squad van was passing the tram terminus at Shauiwan this morning, a tramcar collided with the vehicle and caused slight damage to the mudguard.

The van had left the Shauiwan Police Station on general patrol when the mishap occurred.

ALARM IN UNITED STATES.

FULLER DETAILS OF CHIANG'S SPEECH.

LEAGUE ACTION TO BE AWAITED.

MARSHAL Chiang Kai-shek's vigorous speech at Nanking yesterday, a fuller report of which is given below, has caused the greatest consternation in American official circles.

The State Department at Washington, says a Reuter message, has expressed very grave concern at the threat to declare war upon Japan if the League of Nations fail to settle the Manchurian dispute to the satisfaction of China.

The statement by Marshal Chiang Kai-shek is regarded as the most alarming and the most significant since the trouble began. Mr. H. L. Stimson, the Secretary of State, immediately took up the Manchurian problem to the exclusion of everything else, and it is possible that negotiations will be made by the United States at once.

CONVERSATIONS IN TOKYO.

Nanking, Oct. 12.
If it means bankruptcy for fifty years, China will not hesitate to make the sacrifice in defence of her national integrity, declared Marshal Chiang Kai-shek this morning when he addressed a large meeting of military and political leaders at the weekly memorial meeting at Government House.

The Presidents of the five yuans and other prominent officials, including H. H. Kung, Yu Yu-jen, Shao Yuan-chung, Ma Fu-cheung

"If the League fails China will not hesitate to go to war," Chiang Kai-shek in a rhetorical mood.

and Admiral Yang Shu-chuang were among those present.

Defiance of all Treaties.

"China," said Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, "is facing a crisis such has not come upon her for centuries. In defiance of all treaties, Japan has invaded and occupied a large portion of Chinese territory. In Manchuria and the patience of the Nanking Government has been tested to its limit.

China's Rights.

"Up to the present, China has refrained from retaliation, from any step to preserve her national sovereignty, in the hope that the League of Nations would take appropriate measures to uphold international justice and to punish the Japanese for their transgression of a friendly neighbour's rights over its own territories.

"It is false to declare that China has been seeking to shelter behind the League of Nations. But China, as a member of the League, has the right of appeal to the Council for judgment and arbitration in such an affair, which might so easily lead to a disastrous war.

Tried To Avoid War.

"China has tried to avoid war. She has sought the aid of the League and asked the League to uphold international treaties. The League Council meets again to-morrow to discuss Japan's further aggressive acts, and if it fails to fulfil its duties and the full expectations of the millions of China's citizens, China will be compelled to take independent action to defend her country from foreign aggression.

A United Front.

"China will make the biggest of sacrifices. The Nanking Government will call upon the nation for a united front against the invader. We will not hesitate at war.

"It is sincerely to be hoped that the Japanese will be early convinced of their errors and will withdraw their troops from Manchuria."—Reuter.

Chinese Note to Tokyo.

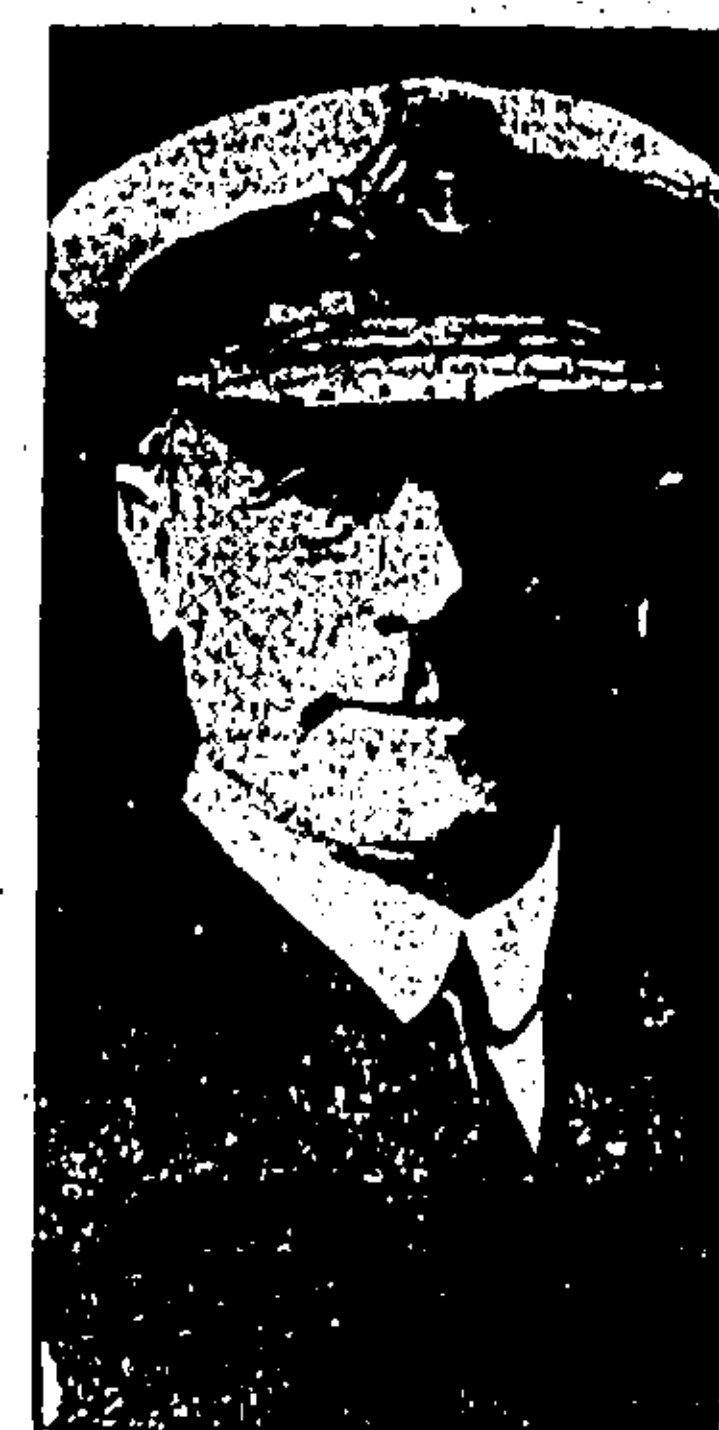

Shanghai, Oct. 13.
The Chinese Minister in Tokyo, Mr. Chiang Tso-ping, has handed to the Tokyo Foreign Office, a note demanding the immediate withdrawal of Japanese troops to within the Railway Zone, and informing them that the Nanking and Manchurian Governments have appointed General Chang Tso-hsiang and General Wang Shu-chang as Rehabilitation Commissioners.

The Chinese military leaders will assume responsibility for maintaining peace and order with the withdrawal of the Chinese troops.

Concession to Japan.

The appointment of Chan Tso-hsiang is a Chinese concession to the demands of the Japanese military clique which refuses to hand over to Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang.

The Japanese Government is asked to issue immediate orders for the withdrawal of Japanese troops from Chinese territory. It is understood that in the course of conversation between Mr. Chiang Tso-ping and Baron Shidehara, the Japanese representative declared Japan's inability to order the withdrawal of further troops until the situation was more (Continued on Page 7.)

Earl Jellicoe.

EARL JELlicoe UNWELL.

CONDITION CAUSING ANXIETY.

London, Oct. 12.
Admiral of the Fleet Earl Jellicoe, who was in supreme command of the Grand Fleet from August 1914 until November, 1916, is reported to be suffering from abdominal trouble, his condition giving rise to some anxiety.

Earl Jellicoe, replying to Dr. Schacht's criticism of Germany's finances, says that the Reichsbank has repaid three hundred million marks of floating debt maturing this year. Therefore it cannot be said that the country is unable to meet its commitments.—Reuter.

WORLD FINANCE CRISIS.

GERMAN CRITIC OF GERMANY.

MINISTERIAL REPLY.

Berlin, Oct. 12.
All that Germany needs to fear is "nervousness and alarmist speeches," according to the Finance Minister, Dr. Dietrich, contradicting the assertions of Dr. Schacht, ex-President of the Reichsbank, who yesterday made a speech suggesting that Germany was on the verge of complete bankruptcy.

Dr. Schacht has been a critic of Germany's financial policy since the Hague Reparations Conference. He fiercely opposed the acceptance of the Young Plan and lost his position in the Reichsbank in consequence.

He was reported to have fled from Germany fearing arrest because of his speech, but he dramatically returned later.

Dr. Dietrich, replying to Dr. Schacht's criticism of Germany's finances, says that the Reichsbank has repaid three hundred million marks of floating debt maturing this year. Therefore it cannot be said that the country is unable to meet its commitments.—Reuter.

Basle Bankers Hopeful.

Basle, Oct. 12.
A generally optimistic feeling prevails in regard to the future developments in European financial matters.

This is the opinion of a high official of the Bank of International Settlements, whose Board has concluded its session after a long discussion on the general monetary situation.

Credits Renewed.

The Board decided to renew the existing credits to the Reichsbank and the Central Banks of Austria and Yugoslavia, and to invite to Basle representatives of the central banks of Central Europe and the Balkans which have restricted currency operations.

The object of the conference will be to co-ordinate regulations in order to mitigate inconveniences.—Reuter.

KOWLOON WEDDING.

PORTUGUESE COUPLE MARRIED.

The wedding was solemnised at the Rosary Church on Saturday of Miss Elizabeth Catherine Pearson, daughter of the late Inspector Pearson and Mrs. J. Pearson, and Mr. Jose Maria d'Almada e Castro, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. d'Almada e Castro. The Rev. Father Spada officiated.

Dressed in a gown of georgette and French lace made by Mme. Blanche of Shanghai, the bride entered the Church on the arm of her brother, Mr. G. W. Pearson, and was attended by the Misses M. and A. d'Almada e Castro and G. Botelho as bridesmaids, with Misses Vivi and Elaine Rull and Margaret Xavier as flower girls. The bridesmaids wore pastel shades of georgette and the flower girls pale yellow georgette.

The bride carried a bouquet of white, Honolulu, crepe and maiden hair fern. The bridesmaids had bouquets of Honolulu crepe, the flower girls carrying white posies.

The bride's mother's dress was of beige crepe de chine, with hat to match, and the bridegroom's mother's dress of black flowered georgette. Mrs. Rull was matron of honour.

The duties of best man were carried out by Messrs. M. A. Xavier and F. J. Brown.

A reception was subsequently held at 4, Granville Road, the happy couple later leaving for Macao for their honeymoon. The bride's going away dress was of green moran crepe with hat and bag to match.

IF LEAGUE FAILS.

CHIANG DECLARES HE WILL GO TO WAR.

Nanking, Oct. 12.
At a political meeting this morning Chiang Kai-shek announced strongly on the Sino-Japanese situation, and said he hoped the League would take steps, first of all for a just settlement of the imbroglio, and secondly to prevent an "almost inevitable war." He trusted the League would take proper measures to bring home to Japan her errors in refusing to abide by the League's decisions and in occupying Chinese territory without justifiable grounds.

Chiang Kai-shek declared that the National Government had appealed to the League because, being a member, China was under an obligation to comply with the provisions of the Covenant. He also declared that the Japanese allegation that China went to the League for protection was false.

He declared that the National Government's patience had been tested to the last degree, and if the League failed, China would take the matter into her own hands. "China respects the Covenant and the Kellogg Pact, but if the League and Kellogg Pact signatories fail to uphold their sacred duties, China will not hesitate to make the supreme sacrifice of bankrupting the country for half a century, to go to war, for upholding the dignity and sacred rights of International agreements and to safeguard world peace."—Reuter.

M. Briand Attending.

Paris, Oct. 12.
M. Briand has left for Geneva to attend the League Council meeting on the Sino-Japanese crisis.

It had been announced that he would only make the journey if the gravity of the situation necessitated it.—Reuter.

Madrid, Oct. 12.
In view of great pressure of Parliamentary business, the Foreign Minister, Senor Lerroux, will not attend the League Council at Geneva.—Reuter.

OBITUARY.

DEATH OF FAMOUS SCULPTOR.

London, Oct. 12.

The death is announced of Sir Bertram Mackennal, R.A.

Sir Bertram Mackennal, the famous sculptor, was the son of a Scottish sculptor who had settled in Australia. He was born in Melbourne in 1863. After a successful course in the Melbourne Gallery he went in 1882 to London, where he studied at the British Museum and qualified for admission to the Royal Academy Schools. After some time there he proceeded to Paris, where he worked for two years, and then to Italy, where he spent 2½ years. He acknowledged no school, but was chiefly influenced by his time in Paris.

Settling in London, he began his long career of creative work. In his early idealistic productions such as "Circe" and "For the sith on a seat in the high places of the city" there are boldness, power of design and a sense of the dramatic with a keen appreciation of elegance of form. But they gave little hint of the excellence that was to follow, and to bring him into the very front rank of British sculptors.

In 1889 he returned to Australia to carve two reliefs on the facade of Parliament House, Melbourne. He went to Paris in 1893, but left it in 1896 for London where he spent the next 30 years. In 1909 he was elected an R.A., being the first colonial to be so honoured, and next year was chosen to design the coronation medal and the coinage of the present reign.

His great pediment in the Local Government Offices in Whitehall, perhaps the finest work of its kind in the kingdom, "Diana Wounded" bought by the Chantry Bequest, in 1910, is a marble nude of extraordinary grace and beauty, while "The Earth and its Elements" also purchased by the Chantry Bequest, reveals a rare poetic charm. "The Mother" belongs to this group. The bronze statue of "The Dancer" (1904) is a work not less subtle.

"War" a colossal female bust shows a power amounting almost to ferocity, which is not found in his other works. Among these are the South African War Memorial at Islington and statues of Queen Victoria for Australia, India and Blackburn. "Phoebus" in Hyde Park, Sydney, the Shakespeare group near the Mitchell Library, the bronze groups at St. George's House, London, the small memorial to Gainsborough, the tomb of Edward VII in St. George's Chapel, Windsor, memorials to King Edward for London, Calcutta, Adelaide and Melbourne, the Eton College memorial, the war medal and a large number of war memorials throughout the Empire.

Mackennal was knighted in July, 1921, after the unveiling of his statue of King Edward. In November he was elected R.A. He paid a visit to Australia in 1926, having been commissioned to execute the statue of King George for the new Parliament House at Canberra. He was very unkind to Sydney which he described as the most sordid city he had ever seen, though it could have been made to look like an opal when seen from the sea.—Reuter and I. B. S.

SCENES DURING RECENT FRENCH ARMY MANOEUVRES.

A heavy armoured car passing through the village of Tagnon—a picture taken at the autumn manoeuvres of the French Army, which are being held in the Rhine area, where much fighting took place during the Great War. The scheme for the first part of the manoeuvres was a raid on a big scale by the "Red" Army on the "Blue" Army outpost system.—(Times copyright).

Heart of Liane

by MABEL McEILLIOTT

CHAPTER XLVIII

Liane wished that this music might never stop. Never again would she be so young and so fair and he so lover-like. Her joy was tinged with the faintest touch of sadness, making it perfect.

She said at last: "I can't eat lobster thermidor after that, it would be sacrilege."

He folded her coat around her and they drifted away, glances following them as they passed.

In the great foyer of the hotel the girl saw a face she knew. Impulsively she put out her hand.

"Shane McDermid. How nice to see you!"

The big man in the brown suit smiled. "Well, well, I can't. Mrs. Barrett any more, is it?"

"Not now."

Clive shook hands with Shane cordially. "I haven't forgotten that night you saved our lives."

Shane laughed. "I didn't do anything at all. I was on duty."

Clive said, "I told you I had how you knew what was going on. You came out from town, didn't you?"

Liane interposed swiftly. She knew instinctively that if Shane answered fully, the name was bound to arise. She felt a generous impulse to shield her friend's rival.

"The lieutenant is much too clever to tell us how he works," she laughed, giving him a swift, warning glance. Shane dropped his eyes.

"You mind if I leave you for a bit?" Clive asked. "Want to telephone the garage to send the car over."

Liane sat down in one of the deep chairs under the palms. Through the fringe of her long lashes she looked shyly at this big man who had played so odd a part in her life.

"I owe you a great deal, Shane McDermid," she said.

He looked uncomfortable. "Not at all, not at all," he brightened. "You don't mind me saying this—but you're happy, aren't you?"

She nodded. "Oh, awfully. Why should I mind? You've been one of my best friends."

"I'm glad. Young girls nowadays, most of them, don't seem to know what they're after." He frowned.

"You're not married yet?" Her matronly air was amusing.

"I'm not. I've had no luck with the ladies. The ones I meet in my business are not the marrying kind."

She smiled at him. "You'll find one. You deserve one of the best."

Clive came back. They said goodbye to the shrewd-eyed policeman in the business suit.

"I'm not at all sure I liked the way he looked at you, Mrs. Cleopatra," Clive said banteringly on the homeward ride.

"Who?" She had forgotten all about McDermid. She was thinking of other things.

Clive slipped his arm under her shoulder. "Our Celtic friend. He looked as if he'd like to eat you up."

"Idiot. That's your imagination."

Lazily Clive inquired, "However did you meet him, Liane? You never told me."

She gave a little start. Ought she to tell him? Ought she to go back to that night a year ago when a silly, pleasure-loving young girl had paid with terror and tears for an innocent enough adventure? No, she decided she would not. The old Liane Barrett of the shabby clothes and timorous pleasure was gone forever. The woman in her place was strong and loving and wise.

Shane McDermid would never tell. He knew what an ignorant child she had been. He had helped her out of a bad place. She was eternally grateful to him for it.

So she revealed her husband's question. "Oh, I just met him abroad," she murmured. "He is the cousin of a girl I used to know. She lived downstairs."

"He's a good fellow," Clive said. "Let me do something for him."

"So should I," Liane agreed with hearty emphasis.

Then they both forgot Shane McDermid completely.

On a day two years later two handsomely dressed young women came into a big room with a polished floor. A box of laughing girls stood around the tea table.

It was a beautiful room, with a large bay window looking out onto a garden. The girls were all dressed in the latest fashion.

"That's a very nice room," the new girl said. "I like it very much."

"I like it very much," the new girl said. "I like it very much."

ring at the stone-fronted house in the east Seventies said Mrs. Cleopatra was in. She would take the card up.

Muriel surveyed the drawing room with interest. "She does herself nicely, doesn't she?" drawled the friend.

"It's very good indeed," said Muriel, noting the mellow patina on the green Art Deco chair, the subtle melting together of the colours of wall and fabric.

"Mrs. Cleopatra wishes to know if you would mind coming up," the servant inquired sedately a moment later. "She has been lying down. This is her first day up."

They followed up the narrow staircase and into an apartment of pastel tints and fragile French furniture, a room which seemed the perfect setting for the girl on the low couch.

"How nice of you to come," she smiled to Muriel. "I'm still having to be lazy. Doctor's orders."

They kissed after the fashion of women who have not met for a long time. The languid caller accompanying Mrs. Desmond sat down to blow cigarette rings casually as they talked of matters which only faintly interested her.

"May I see the baby?" Muriel begged. Liane touched a bell rope at her side and a starched Scotch nurse carried in a mite smelling of warm flannel and talcum powder.

"Isn't she precious?" Muriel demanded. The languid lady of the smoke rings agreed.

"Curious things, babies," she offered. "Never could understand them."

Liane laughed. "They don't need to be understood. Only need to be fed and washed at this infant's age, at any rate."

The nurse looked daggers at the cigarette, held in such dangerous juxtaposition to her charge.

"I don't think the air in here is good for her, madame," the nurse said stily. Liane laughed.

"Take her out, Nana. We won't contaminate her if we can help it."

She whispered, "She's a terror but a wonderful nurse. I don't know whether I shall keep her or not when I'm stronger."

Muriel looked utterly scandalized. "You wouldn't take charge of the baby yourself?"

"I might even do that. Why not? I think baby tending ought to be made fashionable."

"How does Clive like her?"

"He adores her. You'd think no one had ever had a child before."

The languid one arose, crushing out her cigarette in a tray. "Muriel, I hate to break up the party, but honestly I must rush. Dining early tonight. They left in a feminine flurry of promises and half-made engagements."

"What can women see in that maternal stuff?" mused the languid one. "It bores me."

Muriel hailed a taxi. "Dunno," she said, thoughtfully. "There may be something in it. You never can tell."

She might have thought there was a little later, if she had seen young Mr. Cleopatra unlock his street door, take those narrow steps two at a time, and rush headlong into the room where his wife lay. No languor could have been proof against the embrace he gave her nor the look of tribute he paid her fragile loveliness.

He said in a troubled voice, "Howells told me when I called that you had a headache. I rushed straight home—"

"It was nothing. I stayed up too long this morning. I'll go slow the rest of the week."

"Darling, promise me you will!" She took his head between her two slim hands. "Fussbudget!" she said.

There was an interval and then she told him, "Muriel Desmond was here to-day. She liked our child."

Jealously he demanded, "Why wouldn't she? Liane's perfect. Like her mother."

Liane laid her cheek against her husband's. "Darling, sometimes I'm frightened, it's all so perfect. Do you suppose you'll always feel this way? I should die if you ever stopped caring—"

Stoutly he cried, "But I never shall. I shall love you forever and ever."

She laughed, exultant, but there were tears in her eyes.

THE ASPECTS OF POPULATION.

LECTURE AT HONGKONG UNIVERSITY.

Taking as his subject the development of economic thought on the quantitative aspect of population, Mr. M. A. Cooper, B. Com., delivered his presidential address to the Law and Commerce Society of the Hongkong University last night.

Mr. Cooper dealt at length with the theory of diminishing returns and the Malthus theory on the principle of population. Referring to the manner in which the problem of population was approached in the early times the speaker said it was mainly in the interests of Government, protection and religion. Cannan said that in republican Rome, Quintus Metellus, as censor, recommended marriage as an inconvenience which should be endured for the sake of national safety.

In the interests of religion even Luther "thought every man should marry not later than his 20th year, and every woman between the ages of 15 and 18, and let God provide the ways and means by which their children shall be nourished."

Obviously, comments Cannan, the belief that our future state is destined to be infinitely longer and much more definitely happy or miserable than our present state, is bound to prevent attention being given to the economic effects of procreation. "I have been told," he said, "that in the city council of York under the shadow of an Archbishop's cathedral a council- or somewhere about the year 1900 objected to steps being taken to diminish infant mortality on the ground that Jesus said: 'Suffer the little children to come unto me'."

The Optimum Theory.

The speaker referred at length to Cannan's treatment on the optimum theory of population, when he wrote that it was now clearly recognized that the point at which the returns to industry ceased increasing and began to diminish was constantly being shifted by the progress of knowledge and other circumstances. Actually when this was published in 1903 the truth was not then widely recognized.

Pointing out that since the war there had been a large output in Europe of new literature on the subject of the quantitative aspect of population, Mr. Cooper said he did not think it was unjust to say that most of it conveyed nothing of "importance" which was not already known. The importance of the writings rested mainly in the fact that they served to clarify the problem.

Quoting Carr-Saunders as his authority, the speaker said mass production and its attendant advantages could only be attained where population was dense, and a dense population was an economic advantage in that it decreased cost of distributing finished products. Even if the population increased to the point where the cost of food went up because of decreasing returns in agriculture, there may still be a net gain to the community because the increase in population may enable such economies to be made in industry as will more than offset the increased cost of food.

The truth about the widely popular optimum theory of population seems to be this, that it helps us to understand hypothetically how the size of populations affects production; it can do no more. The economist has no indicator of over or under population that may even be called roughly accurate, and even if he had, its arrow would never be still. In practice we are not concerned so much to attain a standard of living we have never experienced as we would be to lose a standard we have already experienced.

Economists Not Seers.

In conclusion, Mr. Cooper said it was fairly obvious that the problem of population size was closely bound up with the problem of industrial depression. Remembering only the uncertainty of the occurrence and effects of inventions applicable to industry, it was impossible to say whether a population in any area of the world should be larger or smaller than it was. The optimum if it could be considered at all would have to be considered dynamically and not statically, and economists were not seers.

Most economists, if pressed, would probably approve of falling birth rates in western Europe, would urge still greater scientific financial support for scientific research, more particularly in the field of plant biology, and urge that Governments should do more than they had done to restrict birth among the lowest strata of the population. But as he had said before, all economists were not politicians, and all politicians were not economists.

The lecture was delivered in the Union Assembly Hall and listened to by a large and appreciative audience. The speaker was suitably thanked for his address by Professor Robertson.

ANAEMIA IN WOMEN.

The demands made by nature on a woman's system naturally make her more liable to fall victim to anaemia (blood impoverishment) than a man. Indeed by far the greater proportion of women's ailments are directly traceable to this insufficiency of the blood.

Everyone has seen cases of women who in some mysterious unaccountable way start to droop and fade, become pale, weak and listless, suffer from sudden fainting fits, dizziness or palpitation. These are the signs of incipient anaemia, which, unless checked, soon develops more serious complications, such as nervous prostration, dyspepsia, pains in back and limbs, and a general physical enfeeblement.

DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS

The world-famous, blood-making tonic pills, have built up their reputation upon their continuous success in the treatment of this class of ailments.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills comprise a formula discovered by an eminent medical practitioner of Edinburgh University who used it with remarkable success in his own practice for many years in cases where the essential need was the rehabilitation of the blood-stream. Nothing has since been discovered which will more rapidly and surely WOMEN'S WORLDFOR OUR LADY READERS.*Evening Wraps are Seen in Vivid Hues.

FACIAL EXPRESSION

(By a Mere Man.)

It is an undeniable fact, that despite all her attempts to retain "that boyish figure" and "that schoolgirl complexion" women are often more wrinkled than men. True, the great majority of them are very attractive, but there are many faces which, either through deliberate carelessness or chronic moodiness on the part of their owners, have lost the greater part of whatever charm they may have possessed.

A year or two ago Pola Negri said that one serious fault of our "magnificent-looking" men and women is that they all wear masks to hide their emotions. But that is not strictly true. While a woman may strive in this way to cover up her emotions, and apply cosmetic coatings of cream and powders to help her do so, the fact remains that both character and emotions are literally engraved upon her face.

A writer who claims to have made a special study of the faces of women of all ages whom he has "caught unawares" confesses to have "found them sad, strained, and anxious. A little observation will show that there is a good deal of truth in this, and if the experiment is carried a little further some startling evidence will be discovered.

The Mask-Like Face.

For instance, the woman who is given to much chinquering of her shoulders and raising of her eyebrows will find her parallel lines running across her forehead long before they should be there. The near-sighted woman who has a fact that she needs glasses openly invites those perpendicular lines in the middle of the forehead which are often mistaken for a sign of permanent ill-temper. Others who are given to repining speedily induce those long melancholy furrows running downward from either side of the nose which give the impression remarked upon by the writer above mentioned. No doubt a great deal can be done to ward off these disfiguring facial furrows, especially if women will pay more attention to the cultivation of serenity and repose of manner.

The mask-like face of which Pola Negri complains is not inspiring to the beholder. Rather is it something to be wondered at that women can be so foolish as to hide their natural charms under an expression which can only be acquired through much self-torture and discipline.

To appear at her best woman must allow for the free and untempered expression of her personality. There are no two faces exactly alike, and to hide their expression under a mask of immobility is to rob them of more than half their charm, a loss which few modern women can afford to contemplate.

AN OLD COUNTRY APPLE PIE

Line a deep greased pie-dish with plain pastry. Fill the dish with cored, cored, and sliced apples (greenings are suitable), and between each layer of apple sprinkle sugar mixed with a little grated nutmeg. A tablespoonful of water may be added.

Cover the greased rim of the dish with a strip of pastry; cover the top with more pastry, pressing the edge all round, and bake for three-quarters of an hour—a nice light brown.

FAINTING—First Aid.

(By a Family Doctor.)

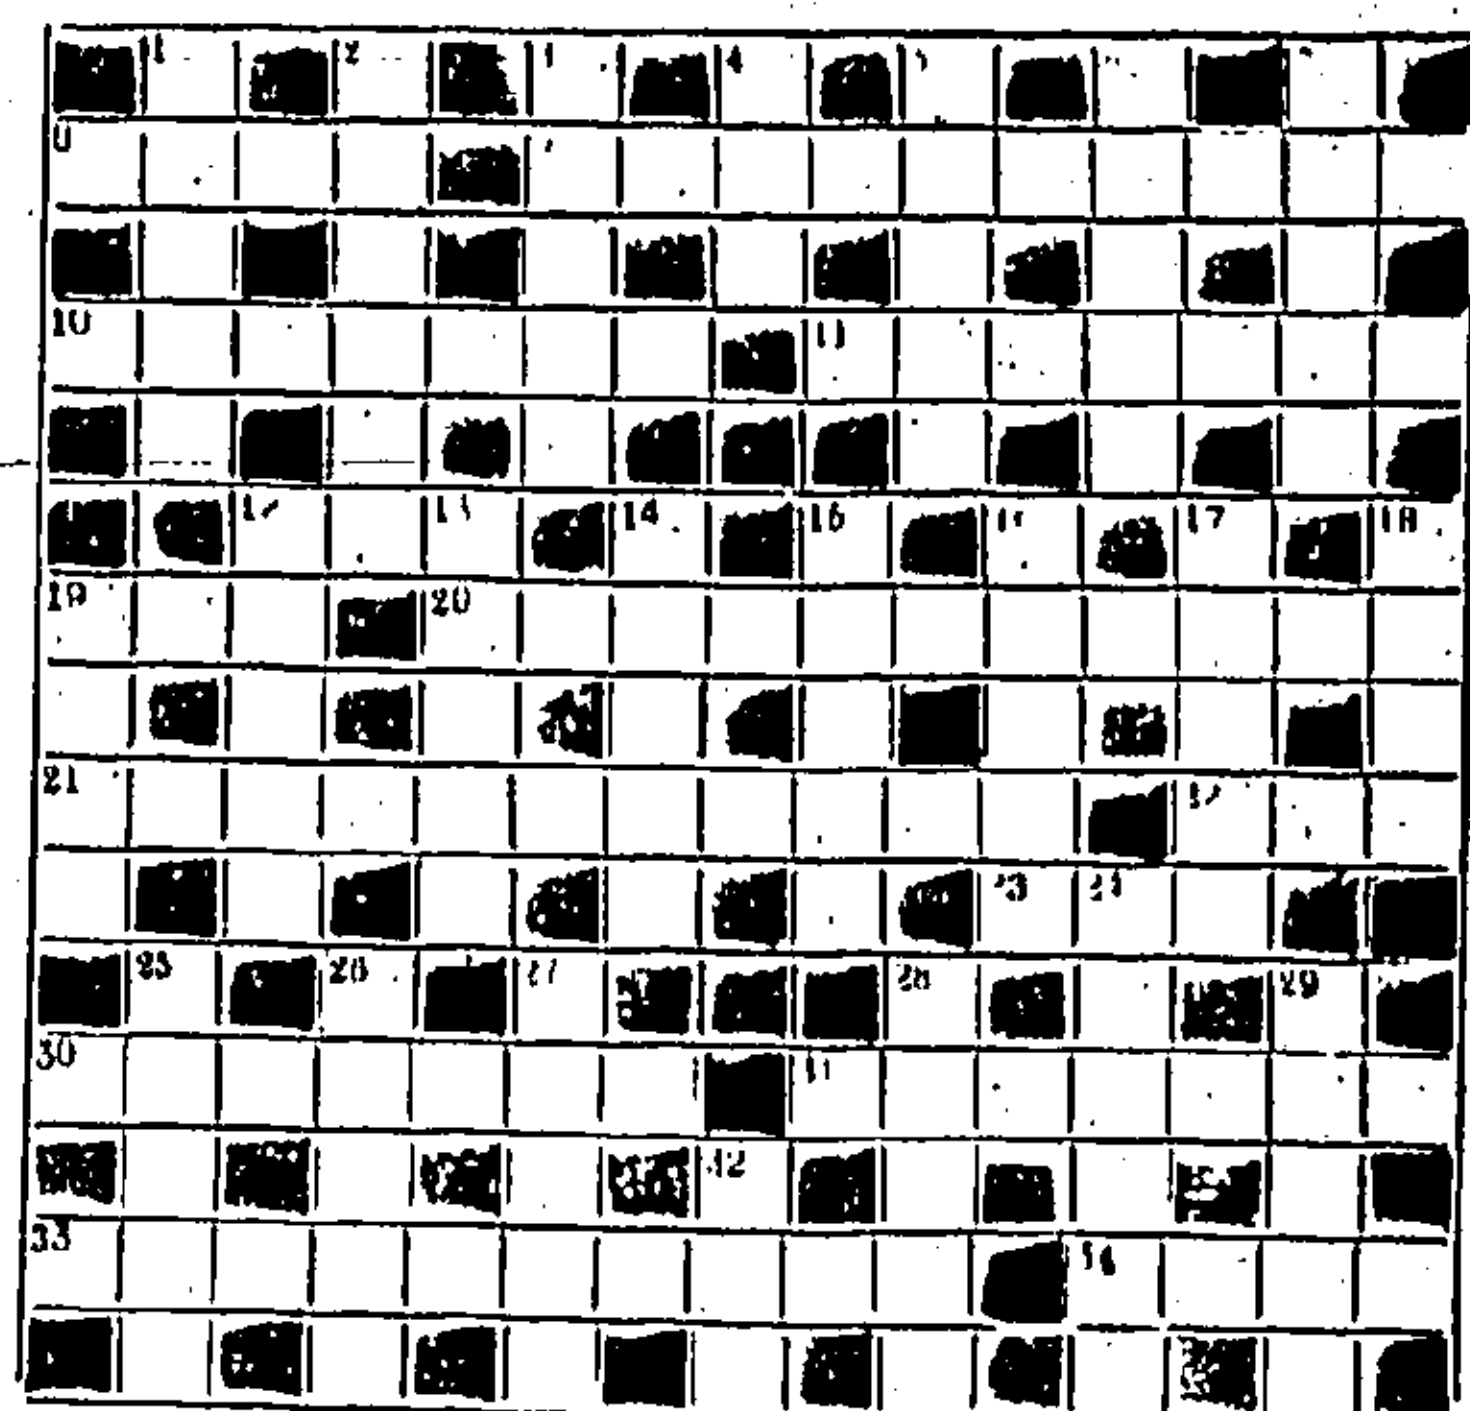

If a person suddenly feels faint but has not already fainted away, make him sit down on a chair and lower his head well down between his knees. Before you do this any tight scarf or collar round his neck must be loosened.

The effect of this is to restore the circulation to the brain; and very frequently this simple posture will quickly make the patient feel quite himself again. If "smelling-salts" are available these can be applied to the nose. When the patient is feeling better a mouthful of brandy or whisky in water will often be of additional service.

Fainting so often occurs in an overheated room; the patient should therefore be helped as soon as possible out into the open or into a cooler room or passage where there is a good current of fresh air.

If the patient faints completely away he should immediately be laid flat on his back, and again all tight clothing loosened. If in church he should be laid on the pew, not on the floor between the pews—for there is little or no fresh air and the position is one from which it is difficult to move him. Better still is it to carry the patient (as flat as possible) gently into the open air; lay him flat with his head, if possible, slightly lower than his body; raise his legs up somewhat; fan the face and sprinkle cold water over the forehead.

If people faint in the sun they should be moved into a shady place and the same treatment carried out.

BRITAIN AND THE CRISIS.

In face of the world crisis, it is becoming gradually understood in Britain that business and industry can never be as they have been before. Change is needed, and change will have to come. Facing this, the financial and economic crisis, which the National Government was formed to overcome, will be only the first of a series of annual crises when it comes to enacting the Budget. Either Britain will have to do more business, or its Government will have to contemplate spending less and less on national purposes. Part of the nation's troubles, of course, are due to circumstances over which it has had no control. World depression is universal, it hits big countries and little countries alike.

In the past, Britain's wealth was founded mainly on shipping, insurance business, export trade and foreign investments. All of them have been hard hit by the world depression. In practically every port of any importance, ocean-going vessels can be seen lying up because there is no freight for them to carry. Marine and fire insurance has also suffered much from the world slump, and this business, too, formerly brought much money to London and Liverpool. It was British money that developed countries like the Argentine and other far-off places. British money built their railways and their electrical plant. The drop in grain prices has hit the Argentine as well as British holders of shares in companies doing business there. Finally, there is Britain's export trade. Coal, textiles and steel products have been especially affected. Here, it must be confessed, not only the world situation but the home situation was at fault. Britain has lagged behind—in industrial organization, compared with some of her competitors, but there were other countries farther behind than Britain which have been able to undersell her in her own markets. The secret was wages. The United States paid the world's highest wages, but by organization got enormous mass production. Countries like Poland and Czechoslovakia could compete with Britain in the coal business because their miners were paid much less. But in spite of all, Britain has maintained a higher wage scale and a higher standard of living for her workers than any country in Europe. Can she afford to maintain that standard? Labourites fear that the cutting of the dole for the unemployed may be followed by a determined effort to cut the wages of the employed. Needless to say, the Labour Party will resist any such move to the utmost.

Meanwhile, there are all manner of ideas being put forward as a solution of the crisis. Some of these may be found in the political "platforms" which have recently been announced. But outside the ranks of politicians we have prominent business men and economists urging bimetallism. In this connexion, we may recall the recent declaration of Sir Henry Deterding, the Director General of the Royal Dutch Petroleum Company, a level-headed man of business, when he asserted that "in my opinion, and I cannot reiterate it too strongly, an immediate adoption of bimetallism is the only possible remedy for the recovery of our sick world to-day: in other words, the restoration of a silver standard. This he puts forward as a "profound conviction, based on an international business experience which has been very wide." His plea would have been music to the ears of the late William Jennings Bryan, who fought two Presidential campaigns in America on the silver issue. Opinions may differ as to the wisdom of such a move, but, as we have previously had occasion to remark, it is commanding more and more attention as time goes by.

The Cause of Crises.

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, who is seeking almost dictatorial powers to rectify Great Britain's trade balance and avert financial catastrophe, is an illustration of the way in which ordinary modes of government get thoroughly upset when finances are at a crisis. Whenever a Parliament is called to handle urgent difficulties of this kind, no-one can forecast with any accuracy just how things are going to turn out. In England's case, the chances are probably several hundred to one that the old order will survive unchanged. But history is full of cases that brought in new eras entirely. One of the earliest of such cases was furnished by England itself. The disagreement between the King and Parliament which wound up with Charles I on the scaffold, came into being because of a financial crisis. It started mildly enough as a dispute over appropriations for the expensive and inglorious wars in which Charles had embroiled the country; it ended, some years later, in Oliver Cromwell. The French revolution started in the same way. That also began very mildly. French finances were in a chaotic condition—due partly to France's intervention in the war for American independence. Louis XVI was forced to summon the States General to find a solution. The confusion that followed did not end until Louis had gone to the guillotine and Napoleon had arisen to vex and rearrange Europe. Those are probably the two outstanding examples. There are other minor ones. The emergence of most of Europe's present-day dictators came in just such a manner, although usually with less violence. To be sure, the chances that the financial crisis in England will result in a revolution, or in anything even resembling a revolution, are microscopic. England's genius for orderly self-government can be counted on to meet almost any kind of emergency. But the seeds of danger are there, nevertheless. Government seldom faces a graver risk than when it has to devote its entire energies to settling finances in order.

At Thursday's meeting of the Legislative Council, the first readings of Bills to amend the Code of Civil Procedure, the Arms and Ammunition Ordinance, the Public Preservation Ordinance, and the Sui Generis Funds Ordinance will be taken; while second readings comprise Bills to amend the law relating to Registration of Births and Deaths, Liqueurs, Consolidation Ordinance, Gunpowder and Firearms Ordinance, and Stamp Ordinance.

The Empress of Russia left Shanghai at 9 a.m. to-day and is due in Hongkong at 9 a.m. on Thursday.

The Hongkong Volunteer Defence Corps advertise that a Promenade Concert will be held at the Kowloon Cricket Club on Friday, October 23, commencing at 9.15 p.m. sharp. The price of admission is $1.00 including tax.

"A Connecticut Yankee," now showing at the King's Theatre, is drawing large audiences. It is an extremely funny film, which we can without hesitation commend to cinema-goers. Will Rogers is here seen and heard at his best.

It is interesting to note in connexion with the death of Sir Bertram Macdonnell, the noted sculptor, that he was the creator of the statue of Sir Henry May which occupies a prominent place near the Hongkong Cemetery.

A mishap on the s.s. Taihoshek led to the admission into hospital yesterday of a coolie with injuries to his head and body. It was reported that he went to sleep on some bags of rice and was found by the crew of the steamer dropping down a distance of some 15 feet.

Convicted on the charge of being in possession of 100 taels of non-Government opium, a young Chinese was fined $3,000 or one year by Mr. Fraser at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning. It was stated that the defendant was arrested at the Kowloon-Railway Station.

For keeping sly brothels in various places in Kowloon, two women were fined $100 or six weeks' hard labour by Mr. Fraser at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning. Another woman was fined $50 or one month for the same offence. She was stated to be only a servant, but she had full charge of the premises.

The 6th general meeting of the Educational Society, Hongkong University, will be held to-morrow in Room "K" of the main building at 8.30 p.m., when Father D. J. Finn, S.J., will deliver a lecture on "Sources of Western Culture," with lantern slides. All interested are welcome. Tea will be served after the meeting.

The election of a Justice of the Peace to a seat on the Licensing Board in place of Dr. W. V. M. Koch, vacated on his retirement consequent upon leaving the Colony recently, which was to have been held to-morrow, will not now be held, as no nominations to fill the post have been sent in. It is expected that His Excellency the Governor will nominate a Justice of the Peace to fill the vacancy.

Three coolies employed at the Shamshui Military Camp were charged before Mr. Fraser at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning with larceny of a quantity of clothing from the camp and alternatively with unlawful possession. After hearing the facts of the case, his Worship found that there was no evidence of larceny, but convicted defendants on the charge of unlawful possession. His Worship sentenced the first defendant to three months' hard labour and the other two to six weeks each.

IN CHINA WITH THE FLEET AIR ARM.

By NIGEL LEE.

A great aircraft carrier lies in the sunshine at the Poo Tung wharf. From the Shanghai side of the river she resembles a massive row of flat topped buildings. From her quarterdeck, some officers are watching the coolies, who work in pairs, unloading cotton from a lighter just astern. The air is full of their weird chanting. They walk jerkily, carrying the heavy bales slung from bamboo poles which they support on pads on their naked shoulders.

The white enamelled hanger, which opens on to the quarterdeck, contains a few 111 D spotter-reconnaissance aircraft and three single seater fighters. All are rigged as floatplanes, and their land undercarriages are stowed overhead among the powerful electric lamps which illuminate the hanger.

The second flight of 111 D's has been landed. They are co-operating with the Army to defend Shanghai against the huge Chinese host which threatens it. For an aerodrome, they use the race course in the middle of the city, and are housed in ingenious "mat-shed" hangers. These are composed of a framework of bamboo poles, covered over with mats of interwoven palm leaves. They are strong, watertight, and last, and were built by native labour in two or three days. The flight is photographing the surrounding country, to enable the army to advance if war should become inevitable.

The organisation of this Fleet Air Arm flight intrigues the soldiers. The (naval) captain of the carrier is their boss, but as they have been landed for more than a fortnight, they are under Air Force discipline. The flight commander happens to be a captain of Marines, who wears Marine uniform, but is also a flight lieutenant R.A.F. One of the observers in his flight is a lieutenant commander R.N., who is of course, senior to him, but under his orders; it is a Chinese puzzle from the West; unworkable except by the goodwill and determination of those concerned.

The dangers which this flight faces in flying from the centre of a large city where a forced landing would be fatal, are no worse than those with which the floatplanes are confronted. Although the tortuous river is as wide as the Thames at Westminster, it bristles with masts of junks, funnels of steamers, and numerous sampans and ferryboats. The prevailing wind blows across the river, which makes it still more difficult to judge a take off or landing.

Both flights have to make the best of it. It is the boast of the Fleet Air Arm that they are always ready for anything, anywhere. The lives and property of thousands of British and other foreigners were threatened, and the Fleet Air Arm had arrived to protect them, two months, ahead of the most mobile R.A.F. squadron.

Daily reconnaissance is made, to look for the massing of troops or junks. The Northern Army under General Chung Sun Fung has retreated to the North bank of the Yangtze, while Chang Kai-shek with his Cantonese Army threatens Shanghai from the South and West. Shanghai is the key to the trade of the vast riches of the Yangtze Valley, and both Generals desire to possess it.

"So glad you like it. Just a little thing I found on the bargain counter."

A signalman appears suddenly on the carrier's quarterdeck, bearing a message. It is from a British cruiser anchored in the Yangtze, off the mouth of the "Northern" Chinese cruiser has arrived and opened fire on the Woo Sung Fort.

A bugle sounds, a 111 D is rushed on to the quarterdeck, its wings are then spread and its engines started.

Having snatched up his life-saving packet, flying helmet, and goggles, a naval observer climbs into the rear cockpit and receives some trays of Lewis gun ammunition from a seaman who hands them up to him. A flying officer R.A.F., scrambles into the pilot's seat, and they wait for the engine to warm up.

Overhead, the flying-deck juts squarely, shading them from the sun. Cranes are mounted at the two foremost corners of the quarterdeck, and the purchase of one is hooked to the seaplane. The pilot runs up the engine and its temporary roar silences the chant of the coolies. The crane wire tautens, lifts the seaplane clear of the deck and swings her over the side. Fleet Air Arm men guiding her wings and tail.

"Got your ransom, old boy?" the observer asks the pilot, referring to the document written in Chinese, which each member of the float-plane's crew is supposed to carry. The document promises reward to anyone bringing the bearer's body, dead or alive, to one of H.M. ships.

The pilot grins and nods. The floats slap the waters as the machine sits down, and a moment later, the crane wire is slack enough for the observer to unhook it from the slings. When he has done so, he bangs the centre section with his open hand—a signal to the pilot to go on. The pilot puts on his engine and taxis out into the muddy river, anxious to reach the Woo Sung Fort as soon as possible.

At the wharf opposite lies a Japanese cruiser whose people are critically interested. Sailing up stream towards the floatplane, are three junks. Their tall masts and high rectangular sails striped with bamboos make it impossible for the seaplane to take off, particularly as the wind is blowing across the river. Beyond the junks is a flat-topped sampan, laden with sacks of rice. She is being towed up river, laboriously by six Chinese. The floatplane taxis on, still seeking a clear space from which to take off.

At last her engine roars, she skims along with one wing slightly down, and finally rises into the air with trails of water streaming from her floats to be torn into fine mist by the slipstream from her propeller.

The flat country beyond the river banks comes into view. It is divided into small fields, intensively cultivated, vividly green, and having a still more vivid smell. Astern of the climbing seaplane the great city of Shanghai lies in the sunlight, looking like Liverpool. Below and ahead, winds the Whangpoo, and upon it crawls a great "Dollar" liner laden with expensive Americans. Following her is a small Chinese Navigation Company's steamer from up river, most of whose expensive Chinese passengers seem to be on deck. There are also many junks and sampans. At last, the Yangtze comes in sight, and to the left, where the Whangpoo meets it, stands the Woo Sung Fort—the centre of disturbance.

An occasional flash of flames and a puff of smoke from the fort's guns, proclaims that the gunkeepers, as they style themselves, are busy. Three miles down the Yangtze, slowly turning, is a Chinese cruiser. She is the Hai Chi, flagship of the Northern Fleet, and is bombarding furiously. An occasional shot from the fort is seen to fall half way to the Hai Chi. Those from the Hai Chi, are not seen to fall at all.

The seaplane circles round, watching with delight. She must remain strictly neutral or Whitehall will not like it.

Presently—by mistake, no doubt—a shell from the Hai Chi drops on the parade ground of the fort. This arouses grave suspicion in the minds of the gunkeepers. The Hai Chi could not have done that unaided, they argue. The British seaplane is spotting for her—Foreign Devils! Meanwhile, the Hai Chi is a prey to similar suspicion. So she NOTED SHANGHAI SPORTSMAN.

MR. R. E. TOEG PASSES AWAY.

A KEEN TURFITE.

By the death of Mr. Raymond Elias Toeg, news of which is to hand this morning in a Reuter's message from Shanghai, the Far East in general and Shanghai in particular has lost one of its leading sportsmen and oldest foreign residents.

For over sixty years, Mr. Toeg was associated with the Far East, and his passing, at the advanced age of 80 years, will be regretted by an extremely wide circle of friends.

Born in Baghdad, Mr. Toeg came to the East as a member of the staff of Messrs. David Sassoon and Co. and worked as one of their representatives in various parts of the China coast and Malaya.

Fifty years ago, he resided in Hongkong, where he opened up his own business as a sharebroker, but after remaining here for some two or three years, he took up permanent residence in Shanghai, carrying on business as an exchange broker. He retired in 1922.

As a keen and successful race-horse owner, he was known throughout the East, and in Hongkong, Shanghai and Tsingtao, he was a regular patron of the annual race meetings.

Probably his most famous horse was Rosebery, which carried off many racing honours in various parts of China, and with Alligator, enjoyed several outstanding successes both in Hongkong and Shanghai.

Mr. Toeg joined the Hongkong Jockey Club in 1883, and owned Saddle which ran second in the Shanghai Champions in 1909, while, with Mr. H. H. Priestley, he was part owner of Gay Crusader, often seen at Hongkong race meetings last year.

In addition to being a member of the Shanghai and the Hongkong Jockey Clubs, Mr. Toeg was prominently connected with the International Recreation Club and the Chinese Jockey Club in Shanghai.

Of a very lovable disposition, Mr. Toeg retained the affections and respect of all with whom he came into contact, while he was very liberal-hearted, and did much for charity.

He leaves a widow, one married and one single daughter, and two sons, one of whom is a widower.

TRAFFIC OFFENDERS CONVICTED.

TWO DANGEROUS DRIVERS FINED.

On a summons accusing him of dangerous driving in Fleming Road, a Chinese who appeared before Mr. Schofield at the Central Police Court this morning was fined $20. It was stated by Sergeant Baker that the defendant had driven down Fleming Road, shooting across Hennessy and Lockhart Roads, without sounding his horn, travelling at a speed of 20 miles an hour.

In another case, Sergeant Baker summoned the driver of a public vehicle for dangerous driving in Hollywood Road where he was alleged to have turned the bond into Lynhurst Terrace on the extreme right hand side of the road. The defendant stated that he had averted to dodge a pedestrian, but it was pointed out that he should have stopped instead of taking the corner on the wrong side of the road.

A fine of $15 was imposed.

SQUABBLE OVER A CIGARETTE-END.

RAG-PICKERS COME TO BLOWS.

When two elderly Chinese were charged before Mr. Williams, at the Central Police Court this morning, with disorderly conduct, a police officer hastened to assure the Magistrate that the row had nothing to do with the anti-Japanese movement.

Both men were rag-pickers, but discarded cigarette butts, also came within their business. It was unfortunate in view of what followed that they should come upon the same cigarette-end at the same time. The piece was too small for a division and not agreeing as to who should have it, they came to blows. A large crowd was drawn together in Queen's Road Central as a result.

Each man was fined $4, or four days' imprisonment.

The Vacuum Oil Company writes to point out an error in the report concerning the lubricant used by the flying tourists, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Day. The oil being used for the plane was not the one mentioned in the report but Gargyle Mobil Oil Aero "H".

CORRESPONDENCE.

Civil Service Pay.

(To the Editor, Hongkong Telegraph.)

Sir,—If talent for invective and prolixity were in proportion to logical force, "Reason Why" would be indeed a formidable antagonist. But I regret that I can see nothing in his reply in your Saturday's issue except a number of accusations, from which I gather that I am guilty of rhetorical hyperbole, sheer casuistry, etc. He has not, all the same, shown just where my logic is faulty, and, as regards the charge of rhetoric, he must take my assurance that I mean just what I say namely that I shall be willing to retire from this fray if I am honoured in good times as well as being cut in bad times. If this were done, no fair-minded Government servant would have a legitimate grouse; though it is perhaps to be feared that in our camp also we may have those who would complain even when they are more favourably treated than others.

There is, however, one paragraph in "R.W." letter where he does get down to a definite proposal, of which I take leave to doubt whether he realises the full bearing. That our salaries should be brought down to a level with his own is probably his meaning, but the words "mercantile standards" surely imply that some at least of our Government servants (the most able, or just the lucky ones?) should be placed in a position to make fortunes like those of a Bellios or a Robert Jardine. Does he seriously mean this? And, if not, if the advantages of commercial life are to be denied us and we are merely to suffer with mercantile assistants and not enjoy with them, in what way will the standards be similar?

Uncharitable as it may seem, I am disposed to think that what "R.W." really wants is just butter on both sides of his bread. His plea for equality of standards appearing at this moment when it seems, mercantile standards are low, is a parallel to the plea from another quarter for payment of Government salaries in the currency of the Colony, a plea which was little heard when the dollar was 5/-.

Does "R.W." mean equality of standard, now and in the past, or does he mean simply keep the Government servant's pay down at all costs? Does he mean that he thinks that mercantile assistants should have bonuses in good times and have their pay cut in bad, while Government employees should have cuts only? If that is his meaning, does it not occur to him that he may be doing his little bit to "engender a sense of injustice?"—Yours, etc.,

BECAUSE.

THE DOGS' HOME.

NEW LETHAL CHAMBER READY FOR USE.

The activities of the "Dog's Home" during the month of September showed an increase over August, as 17 dogs were brought to the Home. Of these, one was sent by the Police in Kowloon, six were from the Kennedy Town Kennels, two were found straying. Fourteen dogs left the "Home" during the month, seven of which were sold, three claimed by owners, two destroyed and two returned to owners after treatment. One dog found straying in Hongkong was returned to the owner in Yau-mat by tracing the number of the licence badge on the dog's collar.

Of the remaining 11 dogs, eight are awaiting suitable homes and three will shortly be destroyed in the lethal chamber, which is now completed and ready for use. The chamber can now be used by the public for the painless disposal of pets at a nominal charge. The S.P.C.A. Inspectors have received instructions in the use of the chamber and so are therefore quite competent to undertake any work in connexion therewith.

Public attention is again drawn to the financial drive which the Society is holding this month and liberal support is sought for this deserving work.

The following forthcoming weddings are announced.—Mr. John Hargreaves Little, No. 250, The Peak, to Miss Gretel Strauss, No. 180, The Peak; and Major John Wright Malcolm, R.A.M.C. Peak Hotel, to Miss Alice Cecilia Peyton, Peak Hotel.

CONVICTION OF TEACHER.

APPEAL AGAINST SENTENCE.

FULL COURT ISSUE.

There was a further sequel, at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning to the case in which a headmaster and teacher were sentenced for possession of documents calculated to cause a breach of the peace, when Mr. M. K. Lo appeared before Mr. Fraser to apply for leave to appeal in the case of the second defendant, Lau Wing-sang, who was sentenced to one year's hard labour.

It will be recalled that at a rehearing last week, Mr. F. C. Jenkin, K.C., and Mr. G. K. Hall-Brutton, asked for a revision of sentence and his Worship, after hearing further evidence, allowed the first defendant, the headmaster, to pay a fine of $500 instead of serving six months without an option, but the sentence of one year on the second defendant was not altered.

In making his application, Mr. Lo said he was doing so on the ground that there had been insufficient evidence for his Worship to convict. The only offence that the defendant was charged with was that he wrote the following sentence on a black-board in Chinese:—"The three provinces of the east have been captured by the Japanese slaves."

Not Justified.

Mr. Lo submitted that on this evidence alone, his Worship was not justified in sending the defendant to prison for one year. If his Worship could sentence a man to prison for this length of time on this evidence alone, Mr. Lo ventured to think that during the last two weeks or so, at least 5,000 to 10,000 people in Hongkong should be in gaol now.

Continuing, Mr. Lo said his Worship could only refuse to grant the application if he thought it was a frivolous one. Mr. Lo assured his Worship that his application was a genuine one, and a very determined one, and asked leave to take the case before the Full Court of Appeal.

His Worship granted the application.

NANKING WAR TALK.

settled. Japan also desires the settlement of all outstanding Sino-Japanese issues.—Rensha.

Leaflet Bombardment.

Shanghai, later. It is reported from Chinchow that two Japanese aeroplanes appeared over the city yesterday, venting considerable panic among the populace. The planes, however, merely dropped leaflets.—Rensha.

Anglo-Japanese Talk.

Geneva, Oct. 12. Lord Reading, the British Foreign Secretary, arrived at Geneva this morning to participate in to-morrow's meeting of the League Council for discussions of the Manchurian dispute.

Soon after his arrival he held conversations with Mr. Yoshizawa, the Japanese delegate to the League. Sir Eric Drummond, Secretary-General of the League, attended the conference.—British Wireless.

Troubles in Interior.

Information received from the interior of China indicates that the situation is becoming more serious daily. All Japanese residents of Yunnan Province, with the exception of the consul there, have been evacuated to Hanoi, French Indo-China. In Chungking, Japanese ships have been unable to secure provisions, the supplies purchased ashore having been confiscated by the Anti-Japanese Association.

An even more serious condition prevails at Wau, the house of the Japanese Commissioner of Customs having been broken into and that official forced to flee for protection to the N.K.K. offices, which are directly under the guns of Japanese warships.

Provisions Seized.

Even provisions purchased by the Japanese war vessels in that port have been seized, as well as those destined for merchant craft, while Japanese house-holders are being driven from their premises and find it almost impossible to secure food. Flood refugees joining in the agitation have created a new danger.

In Chinchow, Honan, Chinese police, who protected the Japanese subjects evacuating that territory, were arrested by the Anti-Japanese Association following the exodus and held in a private gaol until forcibly rescued by the authorities.

STOLEN CROWN JEWELS.

OFFER OF RETURN AFTER 24 YEARS.

Dublin, Sept. 6. There is great official secrecy regarding a report that Dublin authorities have received an offer to return the Crown Jewels—worth $50,000—stolen from Dublin Castle in 1907.

The offer is said to have been accompanied by a request for certain guarantees. This request would amount to a proposal to compound a felony, and it is not believed that the authorities would comply.

If anybody is in a position to restore the jewels to the office of the Ulster King of Arms, Dublin Castle, no obstacle will be placed in his way. There will be no compromise or bargaining regarding terms for their surrender.

On the Continent.

The jewels are believed to be held on the Continent.

They were stolen from the strong-room in Dublin Castle on the eve of the inauguration of Lord Castletown as a Knight of St. Patrick in July, 1907.

King Edward and Queen Alexandra were due to arrive in Dublin for the international exhibition of that year, and the jewels were to have been used for the ceremony of Lord Castletown's inauguration. The detective forces of England and Ireland failed to unravel the mystery.

Diamonds and Rubies.

These jewels included: The diamond star of the Grand Master of the Order of St. Patrick, composed of brilliant encircling a cross of rubies.

The diamond badge of the Grand Master, somewhat similarly set, and surmounted by a harp and diamond loop.

Five golden collars of Knights Companions.

There is stated to be reason to believe that recently mysterious moves have been made in connection with the sale of the jewels.

SIR OLIVER LODGE'S HOPES.

Sir Oliver Lodge, in an address to the Modern Churchmen's Conference at Oxford told how, when he is dead, he will try in spirit to communicate with this world. "I shall try to establish my identity," he said, "by detailing a perfectly preposterous and absurdly childish peculiarity which I have already taken the trouble to record with some care in a sealed document deposited in the custody of the English Society for Psychical Research."

"I hope to remember the details of this document and relate them in unmistakable fashion." Replying to a number of questions, Sir Oliver said: "I have had communications with well-known people, but I have hesitated to publish them, because they are so well known. The newspapers would be glad to make a sensation of them, but that is not what we desire."

"I have had a good deal of guidance and help from people on the other side—from my wife, who died two years ago, and from my son Raymond, who has frequently given me assistance, advice or information."

Birth Control.

Mr. J. A. Fraser Roberts, research specialist in genetics at Edinburgh University, said that most alternatives to eugenics or birth control were rather ferocious. Canon Tollinton referred to the pre-Christian method of arresting life after birth instead of before, and said that sooner or later we should have to come to extreme measures, and this method might not be more unwelcome than some in more common use to-day.

The Rev. S. E. Rose said that the unit were increasing. Eleven out of 12 were being given the vote, and so the possibility of bringing in legislation to check the preparation of the unit was rapidly becoming less.

WATER LEVELS.

DETAILS FOR WEST, NORTH AND EAST RIVERS.

The following table, issued by the Kwangtung River Conservancy Commission, shows in English feet the water levels on the West River, North River and East River on the dates named:

	Oct. 11.	Oct. 12.
West River at Shuihung	6.1	5.8
North River at Samshui	6.1	5.8
North River at Tsingyuen	5.4	5.4
East River at Shikiang	—	2.3
The highest levels recorded are: Shuihung, 41 feet; Tsingyuen, 39.2 feet; Samshui, 27.9 feet; Shikiang, 15.5 feet.
The lowest levels on record are minus 5 feet at Samshui and minus 2.7 feet at Shikiang.

IN CHINA WITH THE FLEET AIR ARM.

breaks off the battle, lays her foremost gun on the seaplane, and fires.

"See that," snorts the observer down his speaking tube to the pilot. "What infernal cheek from a beastly Chin cruiser. Look; they're shooting at us with rifles from her quarterdeck now. I'm not going to stand this."

"Signal from S-1331, sir," reports a signalman in the carrier. "Have been fired at by a Chinese cruiser. Request permission to reply with Lewis gun."

"That's the spirit," laughs the commander to the senior observer. "But they'd accuse us of starting a new war if I said, 'yes'—Reply: 'Not approved. You are to return to the ship forthwith.'"

"Aye-aye, sir," salutes the signalman, and three minutes later the seaplane is flying back to the carrier.

QUALIFYING ROUND DRAW.

THIS IS THE STANCE USED BY WILLIE MACFARLANE, NATIONAL OPEN CHAMPION
IN 1925.

Should one tee the ball off the left heel or more toward the right foot?

Stars differ greatly on the position of the ball with regard to their feet. For the drive, Bobby Jones plays his ball off the left instep. Among other stars the position of the ball is much farther back. The main thing, of course, is to tee the ball at the spot where it will be hit by the clubhead at the lowest point in the swing.

In iron shots, many golfers play the ball slightly more toward the right foot. This gives you perfect position to hit down on the ball so that turf may be taken after the ball is hit.—ART KREIZ.

PRISONER'S HEALTH.

YOUTH ABLE TO STAND
TERM IN GAOL.

After hearing the evidence of Dr. A. V. Greaves, Medical Officer of Victoria Gaol, Mr. Fraser yesterday afternoon decided that he would not be justified in revising his sentence on a young Chinese, named Yeung Kai-cheuk, who was convicted on September 29 and sentenced to six months' hard labour for disorderly conduct.

Mr. Mossop, of Messrs. Johnson, Stoke and Masters, applied for a revision of sentence on the ground that the prisoner was physically unfit to serve his term of imprisonment.

A Chinese medical practitioner testified to having attended the prisoner for the last three years or so. Prisoner, he said, had been suffering from consumption when he first went to witness for treatment, and after sometime, he had been cured. Prisoner was now as healthy as the average man.

Dr. A. V. Greaves said prisoner was admitted to hospital on October 6 for observation and was discharged yesterday. As far as witness could see, there was nothing clinically wrong with the prisoner's lungs; nor was there anything the matter with his nervous system.

Questioned by Mr. Mossop, Dr.
Greaves said in his opinion, prisoner was quite fit to undergo hard labour.

His Worship said he could not find anything to justify a revision of the sentence, which must stand.

ELECTION FIGHTS.

EFFORTS TO PREVENT OVERLAPPING.

London, Oct. 12.
With the approach of nomination day the parties supporting the National Government are straining every nerve to secure straight fights against the Labourites who, benefiting by triangular fights in the last election, won 118 seats on a minority vote.

In response to Mr. Stanley Baldwin's plea for unity, the week-end has seen the withdrawal of most prospective Conservative and Liberal candidates, and it can now be said that none of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's "National Labour" group, numbering about twenty, or Sir John Simon's Liberal Nationals (about thirty) will be opposed to Conservatives, but considerable hostility is felt among Conservatives against the Free Trade Liberals, even when the latter support the Government and there is a great unwillingness to stand down in their favour.

Approximately 1,200 candidates are now in the field compared with 1,729 in the last election.
These candidates represent eight parties, namely Conservatives, Labour, National Labour, Independent (Samuel) Liberals,
National (Simon) Liberals, Lloyd George Liberals, New Party (Mosley) and Communists.—Reuter.

FANLING GOLF.

H. LOWE WINS BOGEY POOL.

There were 43 entries for the Bogey Pool Competition on the Old Course at Fanling, played 10th-12th inst.
H. Lowe (18) winning by finishing all square.
Others scores were C. W. F. Booker
(6) and F. C. B. Black (10), both one down.
The Bogey Pool on the New Course and the Medal Round Competition on the Old Course failed to attract sufficient entries and were cancelled.

A lecture will be given in the Sailors' and Soldiers' Home, Wanchai, to-morrow (Wednesday) at 8 p.m., when Mr. M. F. Key will take as his subject "Totings from a Journalist's Note Book." Admission is free.

PRETTY WEDDING.

MR. G. W. HARRISON AND MISS M. B. MALLET.

A pretty wedding took place at St. Peter's Church yesterday when Miss Maud Blanch Mallet, of Jersey, Channel Islands, became the bride of Mr. George William Harrison. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. N. L. Watkins.
The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. E. A. Mallet, looked charming in an ensemble of blue printed georgette and picture hat to match. She carried a bou-quet of pink gladioli.

Mrs. H. Hall, matron of honour, wore a dress of brown and yellow with hat to match. Mr. Ralph Dormer discharged the duties of "best man."

A reception was held after the ceremony at Messrs. Lane, Craw-ford's Restaurant where many friends toasted the health of the happy couple. They left later on their honeymoon, which is being spent on a yachting tour.

GERMAN AFFAIRS.

DR. SCHACHT LEAVES FOR ITALY.

Berlin, Oct. 12.
It is reported that Dr. Schacht has gone to Morano (Italy), and the opinion is that this is in order to avoid arrest.—Reuter.

But Decides to Return.

Later.
Surprise has been caused by a dramatic telephone call from Dr.
Schacht, at Morano, announcing that he is returning to Germany immediately.—Reuter.

Credits Extended.

Berlin, Oct. 12.
It is officially announced that the General Council of the Bank of International Settlements has decided to prolong for three months the credit of G$25,000,000, due on October 4, which the Bank of International Settlements granted to the Reichsbank some months ago.

SHOP INCIDENT LEADS TO ARREST.

Sentence of ten weeks' hard labour was imposed on a Chinese who appeared before Mr. Williams at the Central Police Court this morning on a charge of stealing a handbag belonging to a Chinese married woman who was shopping yesterday afternoon.

The complainant was in a shop at 198, Queen's Road Central trying on a pair of shoes and had left her handbag on the counter. The defendant walked in, picked up the handbag and walked out again, but as he was tucking it under his jacket he was seen by a district watchman and arrested.

WORKERS' FIGHT ON PEAK.

TWO MEN SENT TO HOSPITAL.

A quarrel among workmen engaged at 356, The Peak, on a house under construction, led to a rather serious affray yesterday when bamboo poles were brought into use and two of the men were injured, necessitating their removal to hospital, where they are expected to be detained for at least a week.

Six of the men concerned were brought before Mr. Schofield at the Central Police Court this morning on charges of disorderly conduct and, on the application of Sergeant Baysting, were remanded for one week pending the discharge from hospital of the other two men.

Sergeant Baysting told his Worship that one of the Cantonese workmen had remonstrated with the Shanghai employees and was struck. He immediately assembled the Cantonese workmen and they attacked the Northern men. Bamboo poles were brought into use and two of the men were injured, necessitating their removal to hospital, where they are expected to be detained for at least a week.
